My Lord.

In continuation of my Despatches numbered 25 and 28, concerning the opening of a School by His Lordship the Anglican Bishop, in Nablus. - I have the honor to inform Your Lordship that the Bishop has acquainted me that the School has now been opened for about a month. - that the instant effect was the publication of an Anathema by the Greek ecclesiastics there: but that the number of children sent to the School was increased - and it is said that some heads of families asked asked their Clergy to add their names to those already excommunicated.

His Lordship adds that all goes on quietly - and has frequently expressed a wish that the restrictions imposed on this Bishopric at its foundation, against making proselytes from the Oriental churches, were removed - inasmuch as the Roman Catholics have never tied their own hands on that subject - and his Lordship considers the circumstances of these times to be very different from those of 1841.

Meanwhile I perceive my duty to be plain, according to the Instructions given to this Consulate in May 1842 - not to identify myself with matters of that nature.

My Lord.

I have the honor to report that I recently made a Tour in the North of Palestine with the particular object of visiting the Agents in the Ports of Lorr and Saida, which I had not before had an opportunity of doing.

I found the country every where tranquil, except with the alarm prevailing among villages from fear of Chelva which still existed in some degree at Acre, Nablus, Tabariyeh, and Beyroot; and had been in Safet.

The harvests had been every where satisfactory.
